The Annual Meeting

HIS was postponed from its usual spring date on account first of the illness, then the death of the President, William F. Harvey, a brief notice of whose work appears at the beginning of this issue.

On November 4th, William F. Nicholson gave the Society an address on Some Incidents in London Yearly Meeting, 1917-1937, much more recent history than customarily receives its attention. The large company of some 130 who gathered to hear the late Recording Clerk at the Cora Hotel were evidence both of their interest in the subject and their affection for the speaker. It was instructive to some to have memory refreshed and to those of shorter experience to hear a survey of the tendencies of twenty years, and all enjoyed the stories with which William Nicholson enlivened his account. The substance of his address appears as an article in this issue.

Isabel Grubb, Curator of Dublin Yearly Meeting Historical Collection and ex-President of F.H.S., kindly occupied the chair. Arthur J. Raistrick was appointed President and Elisabeth Brockbank Vice-President for the ensuing year.
