We need a more widespread care and interest amongst Friends generally in the heritage of the past, and our duty to preserve it for days to come. Apart from recourse to the generosity of individual Friends, which sometimes may be necessary and desirable, there are still trust funds available of which even local Friends may have little knowledge, and other Friends still less, which might make all the difference in saving an old meeting house from disappearance. A survey of such funds seems to be urgently required.

In these and other ways there lies a great opportunity before our members, in which the Friends' Historical Society may play an appropriate part.
