

think fitt. Our frds hear desired me to give you a Leitell acc<sup>tt</sup> how its wth us.

Wth dear Love to you, and the whole heratadge of god,
J remaine, your frd and Bro<sup>r</sup> in the unchangabe truth,

SAM<sup>ll</sup> HOPWOOD.<sup>4</sup>

To the meetting for Sufferings in London

Endorsed : To Joseph Cross at the fox in Cannon Street, or John Baker, sen<sup>r</sup>, London.

---

---

William White, M.D., F.R.S., of York.

---

In Davies's Memoir of the York Press, 1868, p. 335, we read :—

“ Dr. White was a member of the Society of Friends. He practised as a physician for many years at York, and died there in 1790, at the early age of forty-seven. He was the author of An Essay on the Diseases of the Bile, York, 1771; and of Observations on the Use of James's Fever Powder, 8vo, London, 1774; and of two papers printed in the Philosophical Transactions: 1. Experiments on Air and the Effects of different kinds of Effluvia on it, made at York, 1778; and 2. Observations on the Bills of Mortality at York, 1782. Dr. White was also a contributor to some of the medical journals. A Treatise on Consumption, from materials left by Dr. White, edited by Alexander Hunter, M.D., was published at York in 1792.”

---

---

Every man may esteem the Value of his Religion in proportion to the Love he finds towards God and his Neighbours, for on those depend all true Religion, and one of the greatest Marks that we sincerely love God is, when we use our Endeavours for the good and happiness one of another. From Epistle to Friends, by John Bellers, 1724.

<sup>4</sup> For Samuel Hopwood see THE JOURNAL, vols. i. and iv.; Minutes of London Y.M., vol. ix.; Robson MSS. T. R. 1.; Record of Friends travelling in Ireland, 1664-1765.