² Printed, W. Beck: London Friends Meetings, 47-52, and quoted, W. C. Braithwaite: Second Period of Qu., 257-258. Sometimes termed: "Canons and Institutions," beginning: "Friends Fellowship" (Camb. Jnl., ii. 416).

³ John Pennyman in his Life, p. 56, states that Samuel Newton "cheated many of several hundred pounds and then fled beyond Sea," and we know that in 1685 there was one of the name who had to be dealt with (Jnl. F.H.S., v) in Virginia. The editor of Fox's Journal omits the name (compare Camb. Jnl. ii. 167 with the bi-cent. ed. ii. 132), and the name was struck out in several places in the Haistwell Diary (Jnl. Supp. 370). It appears to be a case of the biter bitten.

The need for discipline beyond seas appears in vol. v. pp. 97ff, vol. xi. 28ff.

Marriage and Ministry

"John and Sarah Grubb are, I expect, by this time either at or near their home. I heard the meeting was large. Sally, like a notable woman, went into the gallery after the ceremony, and was largely engaged to the people, many not Friends being present; she then took her seat beside John again, and was afterwards engaged in supplication. In a sitting at the house she was again exercised, I think more than once. Is not this 'marrying as though she married not'?"

Memoirs of Elizabeth Dudley, letter to Lucy Alexander, aft. Maw, 21 ix. 1803, when twenty-four years old. Jonathan Grubb, of happy memory, was a child of J. and S. Grubb—there are interesting reminiscences of and comments on the religious labours of Jonathan Grubb, in F.Q.E. lxii. 1928.

In Sherman's Memoir of William Allen, F.R.S., 1851, we read:

"I gave Jonathan Middleton and Thomas Smith (two of the young men at Plough-court) leave to go to the marriage of John Grubb and Sarah Lynes at Brentford. They were returning by Kew and Richmond, and at the latter place poor Jonathan was drowned" (p. 40).
