

still known as "Unthank's Garden" and a lane as "Joss's Lane." These took their names from Joss Unthank, who had his business and property there. The same Joss caused the Meeting a good deal of trouble as from time to time he would disappear for days on drinking bouts. The penance the Meeting imposed upon him was that he should stand at the door of the Meeting House as Friends were going in and each one passing by would look at him and say: "Fie on thee, Joss." One penance day when several Friends had thus admonished him, a sprightly young Quakeress did so too, but at this his patience reached its limit, and, turning to her, he said: "Fie on thee theeself, I'll not stay here any longer," and walked off. The last of the Unthinks was Gabriel Fisher (1814-1895), always known as "Gabe."

The Penalty of Greatness

"How did the righteous compass me about from the Sovereign, the princes, and the princesses, down to the poorest, the lowest and the most destitute!

"How did the poor sinner of almost every description seek after me and cleave to me!

"What was not said of me! What was not thought of me, may I not say, in public and in private in innumerable publications, &c.!"

ELIZABETH FRY, under date of 25 iv. 1819.

"Henry Callaway lived at 34 Finsbury Circus. He left Friends and became Bishop of Kaffraria. The Bishop was calling on my great-aunt, Sarah Sterry, previous to returning to South Africa. Her parting words are said to have been: 'Fare thee well, Henry Callaway. I don't expect to see thee again in this world, and I am sure I don't hope to see thee in the next.'"
