

The Cambridge "Journal of George Fox"

117.—Vol. II. pp. 434, 443, 444. The meeting-house at West River, Maryland. There is a note to an article by George Vaux on "Settlers in Merion," which appeared in "The Pennsylvania Magazine," xiii. (1889), which states: "The site of this building still remains, being used as a burial-ground, though much overgrown with weeds. The building has long since disappeared, but the place is still known as 'The Friends' Meeting.'"

118.—Vol. I. p. 400. The "Justice Hotham" (p. 18) who befriended George Fox, has been identified as Durand Hotham, of Winthorpe. See Jnl. Supp. 277; R. M. Jones, George Fox, Seeker and Friend, 1930, 60, referring to the same writer's Spiritual Reformers, 209-212

119.—Vol. I. p. 440. Much further light has been thrown upon Loveday Hambly by L. V. Hodgkin's A Quaker Saint of Cornwall, 1927.

120.—Vol. I. p. 438. During the twenty years since the Cambridge Journal appeared much research into past history has added greatly to our knowledge. A case in point is the following:

On the authority of The Friend (Lond.), 1844, 73, the note on Humphrey Lower gives his date of death about 1672 and states that he was probably the only Friend in his family and that there was no known relationship with Thomas Lower. The studies of the author of Loveday Hambly, however, have added greatly to our knowledge of this Friend. It is stated by Maclean, History of the Deanery of Trigg Minor, iii. 383, that Thomas Lower, M.D., of London, baptized at St. Tudy, 11 Aug. 1633, was the fourth son of Humphrey Lower, baptized 1597, buried 1683, and Margaret Billing, his wife, and this is confirmed in Vivian's Visitations of Cornwall, 1887, p. 302, with the addition of 1720 as the year of Thomas Lower's death. Margery Lower was a sister of Loveday (Billing) Hambly, the Margaret Fox of the West Country.

121.—Vol. II. pp. 489, 490. "George Fox died in London without child. The next heir was his brother John's son, George Fox, nephew. He was bred a tailor and resided at Polesworth in Warwickshire, died there, and left one son and three daughters. The son's name was Joseph, bred a baker at Polesworth and died there, and left two sons, George the elder, bred a baker, and now living at Polesworth. The younger brother's name was Joseph who died 26 of July, 1756, aboard the Prince Frederick in Admiral Boscawen's fleet and left neither wife nor child. Therefore the said George, now living [1768] at Polesworth is the lawful male heir of the aforesaid George Fox." (Pa. Mag., xiv. (1890), 80.)

122.—Vol. I. pp. 328, 330, 457. The full text of this "Declaration of Faith and Order," agreed upon at the Savoy, 1658, is printed in the Transactions of the Congregational Historical Society, vol. xi. (1931), no. 3. There is a copy of the original publication in D.
